The 25th edition of Super Bock Super Rock represents the reunion between Meco area in South of Lisbon and the most authentic Festival of the summer. With the beach next door and an even more relaxed atmosphere, the 2019 edition of the festival is set to be one of the best ever. And, of course, also because of Music.

FKJ and Superorganism are two good examples of the wave of creativity that will live in Meco in July 2019 in the next edition of Super Bock Super Rock.

FKJ

FKJ (aka French Kiwi Juice) is Vincent Fenton, French multi-instrumentalist who seems to have the perfect soundtrack for various types of situations: a house party, the city of Hong Kong, a roadtrip through Australia, a night stroll through the streets of Europe, etc ... And yet, the music of FKJ does not seem strange in any of these places.

FKJ is today one of the most promising musicians on the European continent.
In 2012, he edited the EP "Time For a Change", revealing an artist committed to making a cinematic and sophisticated pop. And the truth is that's what we can find on FKJ's debut album, a self-titled record released in 2017. Electronic, blues, soul, pop are some of the ingredients that made this record a hit worldwide, reaching millions of auditions in Spotify. One of the mantras for his work is the question: "Why are there borders?" For now, there is a border that gives a good answer to FKJ: the Portuguese frontier opens for his coming to Super Bock Super Rock on 19 July on the EDP Stage.

SUPERORGANISM

It is a project that brings together members from various countries, from the UK to Australia, through the United States. In spite of the different origins, the epicenter of the band was the city of London, with its multiculturality and creative effervescence. Mark Turner (Emily), Christopher Young (Harry), Timothy "Tim" Shann (Tucan) and Blair Everson (Robert Strange) already had a story together with indie band Eversons, and on a trip to Japan they met Orono Noguchi add more world to this project. From her voice and her words came "Something For Your MIND", the band's first hit single, included in the soundtrack of the FIFA 2018 game. Meanwhile, Ruby and B, singers from New Zealand, and Seoul, lead singer -Korean, also joined this super group with eight elements.

The music of Superorganism is made up of these different sensibilities and a common passion for pop culture. From this cauldron is born a sound of all colors, with a touch of psychedelic and many echoes that go beyond the music, leaving room for dialogue with other artistic expressions - never ceasing to be pop, even when it is strangely pop.

The self-titled debut album came out in March 2018 and confirmed the best expectations of the public and critics with such strong themes as "It's All Good" or "Everybody Wants to Be Famous." The EDP Stage awaits them on July 20 for a true celebration of Pop music in Super Bock Super Rock.
